

Voyage of the Golden Rule

Albert Bigelow, captained the Golden Rule on her mission to disrupt atmospheric nuclear testing in the Marshall Islands in 1958. The historic ketch is being restored by Veterans for Peace for use as an educational vessel personifying opposition to militarism and the use of nuclear weapons.

Col. (Ret.) Ann Wright

Former State Dept. diplomat Ann Wright is returning to Maui to speak on the Voyage of the Golden Rule. The free presentation is open to UHMC students and the public.

In January 1958, Albert Bigelow and three other anti-nuclear activists attempted to sail the 30 foot ketch, The Golden Rule, from California into the U.S. nuclear testing zone in the Marshall Islands to try to stop nuclear testing. They were arrested by U.S. federal law enforcement officials, tried, convicted and given sixty-day sentences and imprisoned in Honolulu. 55 years later, The Golden Rule, was found in a small shipyard in Eureka, California and her historical significance recognized. The boat had suffered the ravages of time and was in terrible shape. She is being carefully renovated by members of Veterans for Peace who intend to sail the boat on the West Coast as an educational vessel that personifies opposition to militarism and the use of nuclear weapons. Using documents from the Quaker House in Honolulu, the saga of The Golden Rule is a part of the rich history of maritime Hawaii.
